e story he had to tell was wed with the closest, attention and some of the incidents he related were startling. He left no doubt about the toleration of social vice by the police de-partment, and held the spectators breathless when he fold of house after house that he had reported as being of a disorderly character. During all this time Inspector Seymour, he said, was in charge of the moral ty squad, and Fryant was told to always

"I went to Lancey," Fryant said, "and told him about Mam ie Clarke's house."

The chief did not seem to b aware of such a house, but did not ask any particulars and merely inquired if the people had been ordered to move. Fryant said he did not know. The chief then told him that Seymour wa in charge of all that work, and that reports of any disorderly houses were to be made to Sey mour direct.

"I went to Seymour," continu ed Fryant, "and told him what I knew, and Seymour told me that he would have to see the chief,"

Fryant's evidence also implicated William Wheeler, arrested everal days ago as having gone to Carmen Daly and demanded ne hundred dollars per month for protection. Carman Daly teled to him (Fryant) first of all and asked him to go and see her. When he went she wanted to whether there was any truth in the reports that they ould have to pay for protection if they wanted to keep in business, and Fryant replied that he did not believe that was the actually been made in Canada.

him know if Wheeler called again but she did not do so.

Fryant repeated one importan stigation by Richard Fryant, who in giving her conversation who has been employed for about with Wheeler said she had asked six months as a city telephone the latter whether, if she paid setor, during the day time, projection money, she could business on the streets. Wheeler quad of the police department in replied, "I am the official fixer For one hundred dollars a month evening. Fryant was a wilopen. > A hint of the possible connec tion with the "higher ups" with the matter was made by Fryant when he said that Seymour, in response to repeated inquiries as to why the houses were not raided, replied that he had been under orders, and could no aothing Ultimately-Fryant did not say when but thought it was a few days before Lancey was dismissed-a number of raids were made a suggestive circumstance being that the house of Carmen Daly, who had refused to pay for prowere raided. Fryant did not conto the stand on Monday morn ing. It is understood that he had some still more sensational evidence to offer.

Mayor McNamara was also or the stand. He told of appointing Lancey soon after his election. He denied that there had been any pre-arrangement that Lancey should be appointed in place of the late chief, but said that Lancey had been one of his most active election workers. He also admitted that he had visited Lan cey at his hotel but said he could not remember the date or what was discussed.

HANDLING HOGS

The hog industry in Alberta has developed beyond the expectations of the most sanguine optimists during the last two years and now, instead of being an im porting province of pork, pro For the best sire and four of his ducts, we are exporting, and our meats have to meet in competi tion with the American and Eastern Canadian farmers' production. The quality of cur meats will therefore play an important part in the success of the industry in this province.

> The English market particularly demands that no pork pro ducts show any signs of scars of bruises, and in order that the ized and also that practically all of our pork will be suitable for foreign markets, it is necessary that more care and attention b given by farmers and shippers to the handling of live hogs

It is an acknowledged fact that the hog is one of the most stub born and determined animals of the farm, and every time you strike a hog with a stick, piece of iron or whip, you cause bruise in the flesh which show up very clearly in the inished product. At the present time, a large percentage of the hogs marketed in Alberta show many scars and bruises, and as a result a large percentage of the pork; otherwise the best quality as to be graded No. 2, simply

Care should be taken by the armers in loading into the wag-ms, and if you have good lacilites for loading on the farm, believe it is money well spent to construct a suitable chute or ap proach to your wagons. The bottom so that the hog will not slip and can walk into the wagon with ease. Also would recom mend strongly that you fix a nar row alleyway to the chute with a gate on the end, so that all the bogs can be put in at once withany chasing or over-heating in the yards. Also see that no nails are protruding from the boards, alleyway, yards or thute with which the hogs can come in ontact.

Cattle by any one farmer, $10.00 at the scales, do not punch them with the wagon rod, as is often done, because every time you do so you cause a nasty, round, Gopher tails; Association to be bruised spot, and generally on satisfied that Gophers were the highest priced pieces of meat the bacon and ham.

You should never strike a hog on the body, but always on the

If the shippers, in loading juto the cars, and unloading, will use from the products of Steele, the same care and attention, the hogs can be marketed in a much better condition, and the result will be that a much larger per centage of the Alberta product In will bring the highest market price, and therefore more revenue and profit to the hog industry o the province.
